

ABSTRACT

A semiconductor device is provided including a first protection film and a second protection film which are stacked in layers in this order on an upper surface of a fuse that includes an upper layer wiring layer. An opening section is formed in the first and second protection films. The opening section exposes an entire portion of the first protection film located directly above the fuse.